A Message from Principal Holbrow

Now that we have digital clocks, ticking hands became an extra, something that became a chore for students to have to do. Our dishwashers mean that only occasionally do we have to fill the sink to wash by hand. We even have robotic vacuum cleaners that make cleaning the floors a thing of the past. We have gained new opportunities and more time because of these and many other tools. We are also losing a skillset that was once commonplace. I have never had to hang my wet laundry on a line in the backyard and I don't think I have missed out on an important ability, but there are some areas where it might matter more.

I used to enjoy working through all the paperwork to complete my taxes each year. I know, that's weird. There was a challenge and some effort that was needed and a sense of accomplishment when they were ready to be sent off. Technology has made it so that I only have to click some buttons on my computer and my taxes are complete and submitted. I appreciate the fact that I don't have to schedule a huge block of my day to work it out, but I also miss it. There will be many individuals who never develop an understanding for why their computer makes the calculations for their refund. They will simply hit the buttons and send off their results.

We are in this position with AI right now. Communication in all its forms is a skill that needs to be developed. Presently, we are able to efficiently analyze data, interpret opinions and synthesize information into our own assessment and communicate to others our own rationale. Those of us who have developed the skills understand the value that is placed in a tool that can do the work for us. Yet, if it did not exist, we would continue to do the work like we always did. What we at the Outreach and Home-Based Schools are seeing is students already who simply want AI to do the work for them. This means that they don't have to read the work. They don't have to understand the context. They don't have to organize their thoughts into an accomplishment. Yet the task gets done. While we understand that catching the important details of a poem to develop a satisfactory conclusion of the poet's intent is not a lifelong skill many will use, those evaluation skills are applied to many other situations.

We will continue to hold students accountable for work that they did not create for themselves and we need parent support. We can lose the skill to read the hands of a clock. We can let the vacuum cleaner scurry under the sofa. We do not want to forego opportunities to challenge our brains, to work through meaningful problems, to struggle until we succeed.

Principal

Parent Directed and Shared Responsibility Mid Year Meetings

Hi Parent Directed and Shared Responsibility Families,

Great news! We are on our way to the mid-way point in the school year. The second semester starts February 2!

If you have not yet booked your Mid-Year meeting please

We are excited to hear about how things have gone so far this year and how your plans for the rest of the year are looking. Please book a meeting with us for your mid-point meeting. The meetings can be online meets, but if you prefer to come in-person we can arrange a meeting at the school. The meetings take about half an hour per student. If you have multiple students please plan accordingly.

Please add items to your child's google drive work sample folder 2 days prior to your meeting.

What to upload to the work samples folder:

- Samples of the AWESOME stuff your student has been doing
- A project your student is proud of (a story they wrote, a science experiment etc...)
- Anything else you would like to show off!
- Please add samples of student work and photos to your file.

You will need to access the drive with a gmail account. If you need your gmail account linked to the work samples folder, please let me know the email and I can help. Students must use their Black Gold Login information. Please call or email me if you need help with login information.

Please call or email some dates that work for you and we will get you scheduled in. Mrs. Andersen works in the morning for Home-Based School from 9:00 am to 11:30 am Looking forward to hearing from you.

Please note your teacher will enroll you in the courses - you are NOT required to self enroll - ignore that part in the video.

Health & Wellness

Kickstand

Kickstand Connect is a virtual walk-in clinic for Albertans aged 11-25 (but they said their age range is soft; kids will not be denied if they are older or younger than that). Their services are provided by Alberta-certified providers, and there is NO COST associated with them.

There is NO limit to how many times a kid can access the walk-in services; they will be directed to further support if their needs are more intensive. This program has a TON of connections to other mental health support programs in the province.
